

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1894.

REPUBLICAN DEGENERATION

The industrial and business depression in the United States is unprecedented. The prices of agricultural products are lower at the great commercial centers, such as Chicago, New York and San Francisco, than ever before in the history of the country. Nevada, notwithstanding that silver mining is one of its principal industries, and that the mines, with the exception of a few which produce gold, or both gold and silver, are closed, fares no worse than States that rely exclusively on agriculture, but that condition is bad enough.

Many eminent political economists in the United States and Europe attribute the general business stagnation to the adoption of the gold standard, which virtually demonetized one-half the money of ultimate redemption of the world. The Silver party asserted two years ago that the cause assigned by the political economists is correct. This year it reiterates the assertion in its platform and on the stump, and the statement goes unchallenged. Not a Republican paper or speaker in the State denies it, or assigns any other cause for the universal business stagnation. Instead of giving any logical reason for their opposition to the Silver party, they rely on appeals to men's prejudices to defeat it. Early in the campaign they made O. C. Wallace the paramount issue, because Mr. Wallace, who had been identified with the Republican party for years, had the hardihood to leave it and advocate the success of the Silver party. Now they make a young man, who was reared and educated in Nevada, and whose abilities were recognized by the Republicans, who appointed him to office, the object of their attention, and urge the defeat of Mr. Newlands because he gives him employment.

From the standpoint of the remnant of the once great and proud Republican party, the important question of whether this State shall be represented in Congress by a man who has devoted his time and ability to a study of the great economic questions which are being discussed in every civilized nation and upon the rational settlement of which depends, to a great extent, the welfare of the State and Nation, must be settled by the out of his private secretary's coat, or Mr. Wallace's motives in leaving a party which had repeatedly elected him to office and always accorded him a prominent place in its councils. Abandoned by its ablest and brainiest men and wholly destitute of principle, in the country's hour of need, it appeals to the intelligent voters of Nevada to support the Republican ticket because Mr. Van Duzer wears a fur-collared overcoat.

THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT.

The enforcement of the Interstate Commerce act, which prohibits transportation companies from charging more for a short haul than for a long haul over the same line in the same direction, is of great importance to Nevada. This fact has been recognized by every merchant, farmer and resident of the State for years. No party, however, had the courage to demand its enforcement until the Silver party was organized. That party, in its platform adopted at Carson, makes such a demand, and it is already having a good effect. At Chicago five officials and ex-officials of the Santa Fe road have been indicted for violating the act. These indictments are the result of an investigation of the charge that the Santa Fe paid millions of dollars in rebates to shippers.

The men indicted are J. H. Reinhardt, ex-President of the Santa Fe road; J. Hanley, General Freight Agent of that road; Nelson Morris, the largest cattle shipper in the world; General Manager Jenkins of the Hammond Beef Company, and Isaac Thompson of Kansas City.

The enforcement of the Interstate Commerce act would be of incalculable benefit to Nevada. It would make Reno a point of general distribution for the north and south, as people could purchase goods, wares and merchandise here as cheap as in San Francisco, as the freight from the East would be no higher than to Sacramento.

It is not surprising, all things considered, that the railroad officials should endeavor to divide the Silver forces, and it is not astonishing that some people should be deceived by their wiles and unwittingly play into the hands of the Republicans by voting the Populist State ticket.

NEWLANDS' ACCEPTANCE SPEECH.

The speech delivered by Congressman Newlands at the Carson Convention, accepting a renomination for Congress is printed in the JOURNAL. So much has been said regarding this speech it will, doubtless, be read with interest. The enemies of the Silver party have distorted the language and sentiments of its candidate for Congress on this occasion. Some emphatically declared that he did not endorse the principles of the party and have endeavored to create a prejudice against him on that account. Had he drafted the platform, as Mr. Hartine and Mr. Cleveland did that of the Republican party, or had he, as has been sometime done in convention, said: "Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Convention: I have not read your platform, but I endorse it from top to bottom," he would not have evoked adverse criticism, but, because he did read it and discuss its principles, the cry was raised that he did not endorse it. Every candid man in this community must admit that Mr. Newlands does not practice the arts of the political demagogue. They must also feel convinced that if he did not believe in the principles of the party which nominated him he would not accept the position of standard bearer in its ranks. The fact that he did discuss those principles in his speech accepting the nomination is proof positive that he gave them careful consideration and understood their meaning and import.

BOSS BURNS TO ESTEE

The San Francisco Examiner publishes a true copy of a letter written by Boss Burns, the railroad manipulator and promoter. It is dated at Republican State Central Committee rooms, San Francisco, October 9, 1894, and addressed to "My dear Estee" at Red Bluff. "Dear Estee" left his hotel to take an early train and forgot to take the letter along. Boss Burns tells "Dear Estee" not to be uneasy about San Francisco, as the situation there will be all right, and significantly says: "I have spent the day principally outside the Committee rooms discussing matters, with parties controlling large interests and blocks of votes and find the situation much more pleasant than I anticipated; you will undoubtedly carry San Francisco by from two to five thousand votes."

It will be consoling to "My dear Estee" who doubtless feels disgruntled over the publicity given his letter from Boss Burns, to know that the loss of the missive will be compensated for by the gain of "blocks of votes."

A POLITICAL TRICK.

Cutting's Methods Questioned by a Student of the University.

Editor Gazette.—The following proposition was submitted to the boys of the Nevada State University:

"Resolved, That we procure the Opera House and have a non-political meeting at which two of the Alumni shall speak, our Glee Club sing and a good time had on November 3, 1894."

After considerable discussion, the boys voted "no." The Chair seeing that the commercial and normal classes voted against the proposition, called another meeting, but of college boys only, in the hope of carrying the motion. No vote, for some reason, was taken. The wrangle was in the interest of H. C. Cutting, candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

They claim that the school should do all it can to help an Alumnus, when he aspires for office, even though from a social view they would not vote him into office.

Some remember the low trick he (Cutting) played when he graduated, by giving, as he said, "the President a sound scolding" when the President had no means of retaliation. I only write this so that if it goes abroad that the University unanimously agreed to support Cutting, the people will know it is not so.

The negative side holds that the school shall be non-partisan, as all voters, regardless of their views, are taxed to support it. All should have a share in any returns it may make. They take this view at the risk of being declared unloyal to their school, but claim that they are right.

The above article, which appeared in Friday's Gazette, misrepresents the facts in the case, and was intended to injure H. C. Cutting, Silver party nominee for State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and did an injustice to a majority of the male students of the University. It is, therefore, necessary that the false statements made therein be corrected, that the public may know the truth.

First of all, the title of "Students' article" bears a falsehood on its face. The "methods" are not Mr. Cutting's. Certain members of the Alumni and students, noting the way in which Berkeley men are supporting competent members of their Alumni who are political nominees, suggested that it would be the proper thing for us, irrespective of party, to do likewise. The proposition was brought before the students last Wednesday at the close of General Assembly. Many of the college boys, thinking that beyond doubt all male students, whether connected with the University proper or not, would gladly support competent members of the Alumni, and it being inconvenient for them to attend, were not present. The result was that the proposition was defeated by the commercial and special commercial students, who are naturally antagonistic to the college students, and some of whom confessed having been misled by misrepresentations.

The following day the college students, and not the Chairman, feeling that an injustice had been done themselves and the Alumni, called a second meeting, composed of University students proper. A short while before the appointed time of this meeting the following notice, the result of a communication from Professor Ring to President Stubbs, appeared on the bulletin board:

PRESIDENT'S NOTICE TO THE STUDENT BODY.

The President has received a communication which calls forth the following notice to the student body of the State University:

1. The University is to be regarded as absolutely neutral ground with reference to political parties and to candidates for public office.

2. It is not proper, therefore, for students to hold meetings in any of the buildings or upon the grounds of the University in the interest of any political party or of any candidate for public office.

3. It is to be distinctly understood, however, that this does not abridge the freedom of the students to express their preferences as individuals or to take action in any way that does not involve the University as a body.

By order of the President.
ROBERT LEWIS, Sec.
Because of the above notice, no vote was taken, and "Student" was cognizant of the fact, but he chose to place the cause in a mysterious light by saying that "for some reason or other no vote was taken."

A short discussion as to the best methods for the students to pursue as individuals in aiding Mr. Cutting and Mr. Norcross resulted in the meeting. Observe that it was not our intention to aid Mr. Cutting only, as intimated by "Student," but also Mr. Norcross, who is a Republican.

We do not wish to offer any apologies for Mr. Cutting's past conduct as we believe that nothing can be said against him that will seriously affect his standing in the estimation of the people. "Student" accuses him of "scoring" the President, who had no means of retaliation. If such be the case the "scoring" could not have been of such a character as to demand retaliation by the President, for he had only to recall Mr. Cutting's certificate of graduation to make amends for bounds being overstepped.

"Student's" excuse for submitting such a treacherous and falsifying article to the public is that the impression may not be sent abroad that the University students unanimously support H. C. Cutting. Instead of attempting to prove that fact, however, he gives the impression that a majority of the University students do not support Mr. Cutting.

We have no reason for complaint if he wishes it known that of the students in the University proper there are a few who do not support Mr. Cutting. But we, the remainder of the University students want it distinctly understood that we, as individuals, do heartily support H. C. Cutting and urge upon every friend of the University that they give their support to that gentleman "student" would appear as a martyr when he says "that at the risk of being called unloyal we take this stand because we believe it right."

Our reason for supporting the members of the Alumni is not merely that they are graduates of the University but because they are competent of filling the position for which they are nominated. We wish to show that graduates of our school are worthy of public confidence and that their training has been such as to gratify them to qualify them to fill with honor any office to which the people may call them.

The U & I Company.

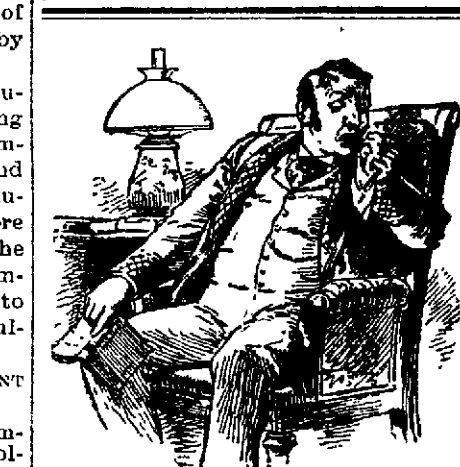

The U & I Company of comic players entertained a good sized audience at the Opera House last evening with their comedy and singing. The play is full of ludicrous situations, specialties and singing. George P. Murphy and James Post, the comedians, are the heavy performers of the company. Mr. Murphy is a first-class Dutch comedian and Mr. Post takes the Irish part well. Walter J. Talbot is a singer of no mean ability. His songs pleased the audience greatly. The singing of Miss Truly Shattuck, Miss May Ashley and Mrs. J. A. Roberts Darrow was also appreciated. Miss Kitty Kursale did some clever step dancing. The other members of the company filled in their parts commendably. The play was much provoking and enjoyable throughout. Peck's Bad Boy was performed this afternoon at the matinee. It will be repeated this evening again. To-morrow night U & I will be repeated.

Blown Down.
Yesterday morning the electric mast that stood in the park west of the depot building was blown down. Luckily there was few about the platform or a fatal accident might have occurred. The big pole fell outward towards the street, missing the building, and the only damage done was to the picket fence. Had it struck the depot roof it would have damaged the building to a considerable extent.

"Last Spring, I was taken down with La Grippe. At times it was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breast seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I begun taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid and the cure so complete. It is truly a wonderful medicine."—W. H. WILLIAMS, Crook City, S. D.

A Good Suggestion

It was suggested yesterday, providing the Regents and President of the University would sanction the idea, of the formation of a fire company or brigade composed of the older boys of the school; that the Board of Fire Commissioners take such action as would be necessary to allow the boys the use of the hand engine, a hose cart and a quantity of hose, the apparatus to be housed on the University grounds. In case of a fire there or in the immediate neighborhood of the school the boys could get the engine out and have a stream on the blaze in short order. The location of the city engine house, and the delay that must necessarily occur in giving an alarm and in going to a fire in that part of town, places the valuable school buildings and adjacent property in a dangerous position, should a fire occur on such a day as yesterday. By having the hand engine on the ground, or near at hand, an ordinary fire could be controlled. Chief Hodgkinson says that the repairs on the hand engine would cost but little, and the only great expense would be a few hundred feet of hose. The suggestion is a good one and if acted upon immediately may prove valuable.

Little Chester Allen, son of D. Allen, who is on a visit here with his mother from Los Angeles, celebrated his tenth anniversary yesterday. He invited some thirty-five of his boy and girl friends to meet him at W. P. McLaughlin's residence and the little folks responded cheerfully. It was intended, had the weather permitted, to go into the country on a picnic, so the little tots gathered at 10 o'clock and spent the day indoors playing games and other amusements. A nice lunch was served and the little folks were unanimous in wishing Chester many happy returns of the day, and were grateful to Mrs. Allen, Mrs. McLaughlin, Miss Annie McLaughlin and Mrs. J. O. Sessions for the day's enjoyment.

MR. NEWLAND'S NOMINATION.

His Speech Accepting It at the Carson State Convention

Mr. Newlands having been placed in nomination for Congress by Hon. C. C. Powning, addressed the Convention. He referred to the history of the Silver party and the nomination of Presidential electors, pledged to vote for a free coinage President, and told how the friends of silver recommended independent action and that an overwhelming, unprecedented victory proved the wisdom of their policy. He said he predicted that if the Sherman Act was repealed the transcontinental railroads would go into the hands of receivers within sixty days, and his prediction was verified, except in one instance, that of the Southern Pacific.

Continuing Mr. Newland's said:

THE POPULIST PARTY.

"Now, I say to my Populist friends—and I have affiliated with them on the silver question, and have acted harmoniously with them—I have said to them that the silver question is the paramount issue. If you do regard it as the paramount issue and the restoration of silver as the solution of the cause of this depression of business throughout the world, is it not better to postpone the consideration of other reforms, the intrusion of which may at the present time divide the friends of silver and weaken their cause and postpone prosperity? [Applause.] You drive those men to the Gold Trust for protection, and let me tell you that these people which you call railroad magnates throughout the country are in the hands of the Gold Trust in London and New York, and are dependent on the Gold Trust for accommodation to tide over their affairs during this unprecedented depression of commerce and trade, and when they get into the hands of the receiver, as they are doing every day, you will find that to preserve the business of their roads, and to hold on to their properties if possible, they will have to align themselves with the Gold Trust to save themselves. These are familiar illustrations which any man can understand. Like all other affairs, it resolves itself into a simple matter of business. You can see how the friends of silver can be divided by a multiplication of issues.

"There are many new theories in legislative, social, governmental, economical and scientific questions that are being pressed by the great Populist party of to-day, many of them beneficial, many of them weighted with benefit to mankind, but they are new and untried, and you will find that the conservative men of the country who would vote for the free coinage of silver, if that was the issue, would be driven away by what they regard as experimental legislation. I can tell you, my friends, that the leading minds of the Populist party agree with that view. A gentleman, who heard me deliver a speech at a bimetallic meeting on the views that I have expressed here on the unification of issues and unity of action, came to me afterwards and said that he agreed with me entirely, and that his endeavor would be to bring the party into line with those views, and dispose of this paramount issue first. [Loud applause.]

"My friends, the silver question involves no untried theory, and none should be mixed up with it to hinder or delay its speedy solution. It is nothing new in Government or economics. Through ages upon ages the use of silver as money has existed. It has had a free use side by side with gold, and it has been only a temporary abandonment of that use which has brought misery and disaster throughout the civilized world. The free coinage of silver is a platform upon which the most conservative, as well as the most radical, can stand, and for God's sake, let us work in harmony and win this great victory. [Tremendous applause.]

"Now, my friends, the condition of silver is just this: The cause has made a greater advancement as a matter of public knowledge and exciting the interest of the public within the past year than it did in ten years before. [Applause.] The State of Pennsylvania is for free silver coinage to-day [applause], but it is also deeply interested in the tariff question, and so you go through the different sections of the country, and whilst you will find a large majority in favor of the single issue of the free coinage of silver, you will find them differing upon other issues which are of such importance to them, which, if involved with the question of the free coinage of silver, would probably defeat it. But I say the cause of silver has made a great progress, as a result the leaders of the old parties are shaping their action with reference to it. You have heard through the platforms of the old parties, and from their leaders, that something must be done for silver. Why? Why, they are not thinking of economics, they are not thinking of the popular distress which they have occasioned throughout the world; they are thinking of political success. Let me tell those Republicans and Democrats that the people of the agricultural States, however attached they may be to their party, have concluded that the best way to bring the old parties to terms is to help and vote for the destruction of the old parties, and that destruction will surely come unless they will align themselves with the national party. With the Democratic party, its southern alliance with New York has resulted in the selection of candidates in favor of free coinage of silver and the selection of a President who would veto a free coinage bill. No such an unnatural alliance can stand. They have yielded to the seductive influences of the Gold Trust. Now, with unity of action upon this great international question, if accomplished through a third party—and the name makes no difference [loud applause], as success is all we want—devoted to a single issue, or at all events uniting with issues which will not divide them, the friends of silver will march to a triumphant victory in 1896. [Loud Applause.]

"The success of the Silver party of Nevada two years ago was an object lesson to the entire United States on the importance of unification of issue and unity of action. History does not speak of a party that met with such an overwhelming victory as the Silver party of Nevada two years ago, being a new party, just sprung into existence, and carrying over three-fourths of the voters of the State. Think of it. It is unparalleled elsewhere. Unification of issues and unity of action alone are entitled to the credit.

CONSIDERATION OF THE PLATFORM.

"Now, my friends, I come to the consideration of the platform presented. I have read it with care. It is an able and dignified address. Its enunciations upon the silver question are clear and distinct. The Silver party, whilst recognizing silver as the paramount issue of the country, has also recognized local questions that bear on the prosperity of the State. You have concluded, so far as subsidized roads are concerned, that they should be taken into Government ownership. That is a question concerning which there may be a division; but you have the right to instruct your representatives. But this question is a most important question, and will be considered possibly by the present Congress, or perhaps postponed to the next Congress. I invite your attention to certain considerations of this question. In the first place, the Government ownership of these roads—the Union and Central Pacific, and other subsidized roads—involves what? First, the payment of the company's mortgage upon those roads, and I think it is the universal sentiment of men familiar with the railroad question, that owing to the great difference now in the cost of construction as compared to the time when these roads were built, that the first mortgage bonds amount now to more than would be necessary to construct new lines of roads. That is a question which you have to consider, whether you wish to now pay more for the first mortgage bonds than the roads are now worth. In addition to that, you have to take into consideration the question as to what Government ownership involves, and as affecting liberties of the people. We have been for years trying to wrest from the control of the President all party control. The officeholders of the nation constitute an organized body, like a disciplined army, to sustain the party in power and hold on to their offices. We had an instance of this fact in this State two years ago when the officeholders of the State constituted the only hostility and opposition met with by the party which carried the State with such unanimity in behalf of silver. Do you wish to increase that great army of officeholders by adding to their number the armies of men employed by railroads? Do you wish to increase this power by making them officers of the Government, voting with the Government? For twenty years you have not been able to emancipate the officeholders. It is a matter of serious consideration whether we could ever emancipate such an immense body of men under the control of the Government from voting against the popular will. We have also to consider another question with regard to this matter, and that is whether there will be greater cheapness and greater efficiency of service under a Government control than under private control. I had a talk the other day with the Secretary of the German Legation in Washington, and I inquired of him about this very question, because I have paid much attention to it, and I said, 'I understand that in Germany the Government was gradually acquiring control of the railroads,' and I asked him the result of the experiment, and he said it was a mistake. He said, 'Our roads are not as well run or managed, and the service is not so efficient as it is under private ownership in the United States. The service is indifferent. The officers hold their positions, and give us an indifferent ownership.' These are matters which I ask you to consider. I propose candidly, whilst these important matters are pending in Congress to consult you with regard to them, and I expect you to join with me in their solution, and I hold myself always responsible to the Silver party of Nevada and for advice and counsel in all matters, and I deem it right that you should instruct me, and if at any time I cannot conscientiously follow your instructions, you shall have my resignation.

THE SCHOOL FUND.

"There is another thing in the interest of the State to which I would like to call attention. There is an instruction calling upon the voters of the State to vote against the constitutional amendment providing for the investment of the State fund derived from the sale of land. Now, if I understand the motive that controlled you, you were afraid of injudicious investments; but we must realize that Government bonds are going out of existence, and you have passed a resolution calling for their retirement. So that this large fund of a million dollars in the Treasury will lie without investment, and do you want to invade upon the principal to pay for the expenses of education. You want to raise revenue from your principal for that purpose, and whilst I think the character of investment should be carefully guarded, nevertheless some means should be provided for the safe investment of this fund in bonds.

ARID LANDS.

"Now, my friends, I have another suggestion to make to you, and that is with reference to the arid land question. Our platform contains no plank with reference to irrigation, and there are two great interests in this State—agricultural and mining—and I have to suggest a resolution, which will go to the Committee on Resolutions, as follows:

"Resolved, That as large expenditures are annually made by the Government in the improvement of rivers and harbors and in the agricultural States, that Equity and Justice demand similar appropriations for public use in the arid regions, and that we call upon the general Government for liberal appropriations to store waters of streams and rivers of the arid region. This being done, the reclamation of the arid lands can be conducted by the States or by private enterprise."

I would like to have a platform of that kind, if I am to represent you in Congress, and would like to have the Irrigation Committee of Congress to start an agitation throughout the arid region, not about digging ditches and reclaiming lands, but simply upon the importance of conserving the waters themselves at their source, for the use of the farmers below when needed.

THE ELECTION OF PRESIDENT.

"There is another plank in your platform which has my unqualified commendation, and that is the plank which calls upon your member of Congress, in case the election of President of the United States should be thrown into the House of Representatives to vote for the Populist nominee for the Presidency. That vote shall be subject to the control of the Silver party of Nevada. That has been a proposition which I have been agitating as a member of the National Bimetallic League, and in Congress, that throughout the agricultural and mining States the conventions of all parties should instruct Presidential electors, and their members of Congress, regardless of party, to vote either in the Electoral College, or in the House of Representatives, for a man, whatever his party might be, who was unqualifiedly committed to the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. I have with that view to suggest a resolution and which is as follows:

"Resolved, That we call upon the State conventions of all parties in the agricultural and mining States to instruct their Presidential Electors to vote independent of party for no Presidential candidate who is not unqualifiedly committed to the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, and to instruct their Congressmen in case the election is thrown into the House to do the same."

"We should strive, of course, for an overwhelming victory. We should try to elect a free coinage President, a free coinage House of Representatives and a free coinage Senate. But if that is impossible we should obtain at least the balance of power by a unity of action on this question in the mining and agricultural States. There is but one sentiment in favor of silver, and if you introduce an agitation pledging all electors and members of Congress to independence of action on that question you will secure a victory for free coinage, even if the third party does not carry the entire United States.

IMPORTANCE OF THE ISSUE.

"Now, my friends, I feel that I have taken up too much of your time in this matter, and I will close simply by calling your attention to the great importance of this issue. The Gold Trust is composed of a very few men in New York, Philadelphia and Boston in this country and have their great center in London, and they have means of communication with all the banks of the country, and in that way they exercise control and influence. This, the greatest trust organized in the history of the world, moves with a certainty and precision which is most remarkable. Its greatest strength lies in the division of the unorganized. There are two kinds of capital, one that is simply in money, represented by cash or bonds calling for money; the other is that kind of capital invested in railroads, in lands, in houses, in mines, in farms and in enterprises of all kinds. The money using class is small and the money borrowing class embraces ninety-nine percent of the people of the world, and yet these are now under the control of the one. Now, the question is whether this ninety-nine shall remain under the power of the Gold Trust, which is bearing equally upon capital and labor, and oppressing them both, or organize and resist. The fall in prices throughout the world in all commodities and products of labor, and finally labor itself calls for organization upon the single issue which has caused it. The employer thinks that the employer is opposed and hostile to him and is disposed to cheapen the value of labor, and the employer in many cases is simply yielding to the general decline of prices that is affecting the world, and he, finding that the product of his manufacturing enterprises is cheapened, finds it necessary to call upon the laborer to cheapen the value of labor that goes into the cost of the product he turns out, and these two classes, both victims of the Gold Trust, engage in an internecine war.

AN APPEAL FOR HARMONY.

"Now, I appeal to all interested in this great financial question throughout the world to bury all less important issues—unimportant in comparison only—and to bury antagonism, because the silver question is the controlling question of the world, and the only way to stop the appreciation of gold is to restore silver as money, and when that is restored the decline in prices will stop, the decline in the value of labor will stop, and prosperity and confidence will be restored, and many of the social disorders will disappear, and when that is accomplished we can start in vigorously for the determination of other reforms, upon which the friends of silver can unite and divide according to their convictions. [Applause.]

"At the suggestion of your chairman, I will say that your platform has my endorsement. I differ with the principles announced in some matters, but I stand responsive to the instructions of this convention, and responsive to the instructions of the Silver party of Nevada, and I admit it is the right of the people to instruct their representatives whenever it affects their interests."

Mr. Newlands then took his seat amidst prolonged applause.

The Alarm Yesterday.

Yesterday morning the town was startled by hearing the fire bell ring out an alarm, and owing to the high wind blowing at the time, the cry of fire was all the more startling. The alarm was rung in on the gong at the engine house that is attached to the University by wire and the steamer was soon on the way. The professors were surprised to see the firemen on the University grounds and the firemen were somewhat astonished at not finding a fire. The University folks had not given any alarm, and yet the gong had rattled a call for assistance. Chief Hodgkinson made an investigation and concluded that the wires had become crossed in some manner, thereby forming a short circuit causing the clanging of the gong. The fireboys, however, were out "wid der masheen" and good naturedly considered the run an emergency drill.
